About Stan Barren

My name is Stan Barren and I am motivational writer and coach. I think I am in debt to everyone for giving back something and only then my dream will come true which inspires me to inspire others. I was belonging from a small town. After school I joined the University where I get a chance to complete my two exams before I was enforced to drop out due to lack of moneys for the fees.

Within the next few years I got married and without a college degree I spent several years working in different jobs. Though, I had this great hunger for reading and writing since I was in high school, with my passion I aggressively studied every aspect of personal growth and development using the free means at the library and the Internet. My personal experience is my main motivation.

I went through some really rough character building states. I have been fired, I have been broke and I have been lost almost everything. Even through all of these phases of my life I was able to maintain a positive approach and stance on my life. For some odd reason, I always seek the rainbow that comes after the storm, and that odd reason is my motivation. My experiences in life taught me many great things.
